DDT Emulsion Controls Flies in Poultry House

Spraying a 1 per cent DDT emulsion on poultry manure two days before the manure was removed from the dropping boards, which were cleaned once a week, gave 100 per cent fly control at the Hawaii agricultural experiment station.

The emulsion was applied at the rate of one pint per 30 square feet of area.

The addition of lime twice a week to the manure before use of the DDT treatment reduced odor and moisture and reduced the number of flies, but apparently decreased DDT efficiency, in the opinion of poultry specialists.

Zinc Coating Provides Protection From Rust

Ten year tests at Indiana indicate that wire having less than a half ounce of zinc coating for each square foot of wire surface had 100 per cent of the surface rusted during the period. Samples having more than one ounce of zinc coating showed no rusting. Stainless steel and copper clad samples showed no rusting. Lead clad samples showed a third of the area discolored.

Plane Flight Cures Baby Girl of Whooping Cough

VANCOUVER, B. C.—A one-hour high-altitude plane ride is believed to have cured 22-month-old Suzanne Carlsen of whooping cough.

Suzanne's father, Camillo Carlsen, chartered a twin-engine plane after hearing that high-altitude flights have been 90 per cent effective in curing whooping cough in Europe.

Dr. W. R. S. Gove, who accompanied Suzanne, said the child's coughing diminished after the first half hour and had disappeared entirely by the time the plane landed.

2,4-D Formulas Classed In Three Major Forms

Since 2,4-D itself is insoluble in water, it is made soluble by treating it with other chemicals. This results in the manufacture of many formulations, all of which can be classified as ester, amine or sodium salt sprays.

Ester, amine and sodium salt dusts also are manufactured. The ester and the amine sprays are produced in liquid form, the sodium salt spray as a powder and the others as dusts.

The 2,4-D chemical is used extensively as a weed killer.

Furacin Is Effective In Coccidiosis Control

New Chemical Proves Valuable to Poultrymen

Animal health, already in debt to human medicine for some effective help, now must acknowledge further aid from the same source. The thing for which acknowledgement is due is a drug called furacin.

Natural source of this drug is oat hulls, corncobs, bran and similar farm wastes. It is one of the furfural series of chemicals, some of which are used in trades and industry.

In the very first trial with coccidiosis of chickens, furacin demonstrated that it was equal to the well-known sulfa drugs in stopping losses. Further research proved that the drug is generally less toxic to chickens than the sulfa drugs, and that the growth of treated chickens is not retarded as much as in the case of those which have been treated with sulfa.

This chemical is as yet available only in small quantities, and still is high in price. Even so, the amount required to be effective against coccidiosis is so small that the cost of treatment is less than with the sulfa drugs. Before long, products containing this new chemical will be available to poultry raisers on a less limited scale.

Who is this Man?

Now and then, in the pages of the Clarion, I run a biographical quiz, under the heading of "Who Is This Man?" For instance . . .

"He was one of the earliest lovers in American history . . .

"And yet he was too shy to court a woman outright . . .

"He came to the New World on the Mayflower . . .

"A cooper to repair the beer barrels accompanying the Pilgrims . . .

"Who is this man?"

I thought that everybody was stumped. But not Ma Hoskins, who returned the clipping to me with "John Alden" on it. She recognized all the clues—including that reference to "beer" and "cooper."

For Ma—who's read her history—knows that beer as the beverage of moderation, is as old in this land of ours as the never-ending American search for tolerance which brought the Pilgrims over to this country in the first place.

Woman Recovers Her Money From Dump After Hour Search

OKLAHOMA CITY.—Mrs. P. C. Smith was ready to believe in miracles after garbage collectors hauled off $800 she had placed temporarily in a trash box in the Smith grocery store.

Forgetting the money, she helped garbage collectors haul the box out of the store.

An hour later she remembered, and her husband dashed after the garbage truck. He enlisted five workers to help him at the city dump and after an hour's search, the money turned up. Smith took home the $800 minus the $5 bills he gave to each helper.

Only One Per Cent of Vets Fail to Re-Pay Home Loans

CHICAGO. — Ninety-nine out of every 100 veterans have kept up their GI home loan payments promptly, according to a year-end survey by the United States Savings and Loan league.

Less than one per cent of the veterans' loans made by the 2,600 savings and loan associations and co-operative banks comprising the league's membership are reported to be delinquent.

Nine out of ten of these associations report the payment record of veterans is better than or at least equal to that of non-veterans, according to Ralph M. Smith, West Somerville, Mass., president of the league.

Less than one GI loan in every 850 has resulted in foreclosure, according to the League's survey. The total number of families affected was 215 for the whole country.

Read This, Men, Before You Criticize the Wife's Hat

CHICAGO, ILL.—Pause long enough to read this, fellows, before you blow your top about the ladies' bonnets.

A delver into history comes up with the information that men originated the idea of wearing hats for the sake of ornamentation. Specifically, they were ancient Egyptian men. Their crowning glory was a military type cap made of stiff wool. It was a foot and a half high.

"They wore such a hat because it could be adorned with symbols of rank," says J. Morris Jones, managing editor of the World Book encyclopedia. "These symbols included the asp for sovereignty, the lotus for abundance, the feather for authority. They were the equivalent of today's low license number and identified the wearer as an important character.

"Hats for women did not appear until centuries later."

Are Your Hands Cold? Heat Your Face, Experts Advise

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J.—Hands cold? A good way to get rid of the clammy feeling is to warm your face.

In fact, the Federation of American Societies for Experimental Biology was told that warming your face is the very best way.

These experiments were done in army quartermaster corps research at Lawrence, Mass., by Lt. Mortimer E. Bader and Capt. Martin E. Macht.

They told fellow scientists here that face warming causes blood to flow faster in the hands than warming any other part of the body. But this means getting a face really hot enough to be red, at about 100 to 110 degrees fahrenheit. Those face temperatures raised skin on the hands by nearly 20 degrees.

Another group from Lawrence reported that for all-around warming up, when in danger of freezing, exercise was quicker than anything else. Exercise even beat the penetrating rays of infrared heat.

Jeep Fan Belts, Tires Freeze In Alaska Cold

SEATTLE.—Here are a few of the inconveniences experienced by members of the navy's cold weather unit during maneuvers in Alaska:

Fan belts on jeeps stiffened in sub-zero cold and shattered like glass rods; rubber tires froze solid; vehicles could not be started by towing because gear oils and wheel bearing greases stiffened so the wheels would skid rather than turn.

Portable high-tensity heaters were turned on automotive engines for a couple of hours before they started. When cars were parked they had to be left in gear so that when the engine started they could move. Shifting gears was out of the question.

Caution Urged in Feeding Salt to Poultry Flock

Extra salt will control cannibalism for a short time after it is added to the ration of chickens, according to Pennsylvania State college. Usual amount is two teaspoons per gallon of drinking water. Salt should be fed only long enough to stop cannibalizing, except the small amount contained in the mash. Feeding large quantities actually may prove harmful.
